Pròiseact nan Ealan ~ The Gaelic Arts Agency

'Sequamar' is performed in Gaelic with live simultaneous translation to English via headphones.

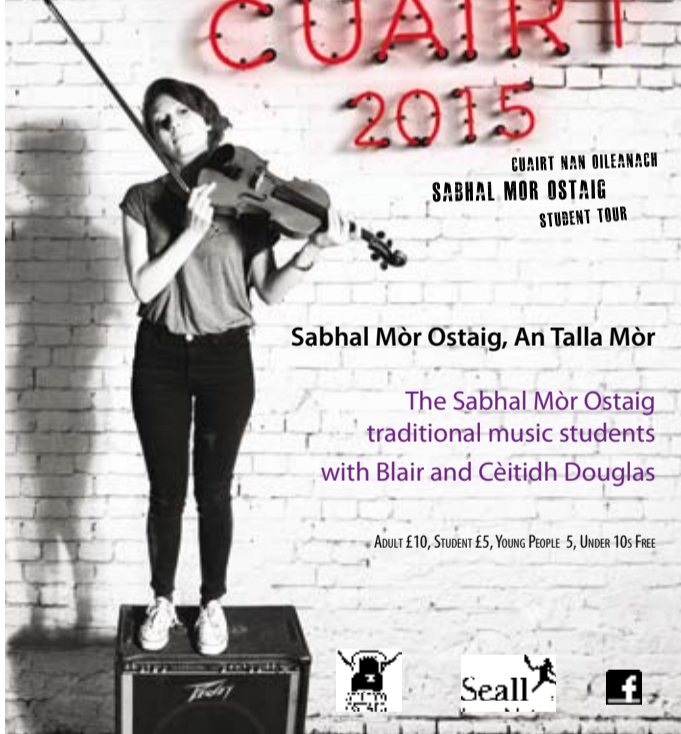

'Sequamar' a multimedia Gaelic language play by DS Murray reflecting on the life of Lewis educationalist William Gibson and his inspirational leadership which led many young Hebridean men to leave the classroom and go to war in 1914. The play is based on factual material and integrates a new music and soundscape commission with experimental film projections evoking battlescenes and the reflections of the soldiers as their stories are brought back to Gibson their teacher.

A localised WWI commemorative roll of honour with the names of the fallen soldiers from each region the play visits will be screened following the performance.

Written by Donald S Murray and directed by Iain Macrae, with Daibhidh Walker, Angus Peter Campbell, Iain Beggs, Sean Macleod and Donna Morrison and music by Andrew Yearly.

'The Straw Chair' Borderline Theatre

Sue Glover's internationally renowned play of profound power, about liberty and love, both lost and discovered, in the unlikelyst of 18th century settings.

Seventeen-year-old Isabel and her minister husband Aeneas arrive from Edinburgh onto the remote island of Hirta (St. Kilda) to spread the gospel in the Gaelic speaking North. Their stormy start to marriage worsens as they encounter the extraordinary Lady Grange, who's tortured by a life of abduction and banishment.

"A beguiling evocation, as light and sharp as spindrift, of the strange life on the island." - Scotland on Sunday

Directed by Scottish Theatre Director Liz Carruthers, who recently spent a year at Sabhal Mòr Ostaig as a mature student. With Selina Boyack, Pamela Reid, Ceit Kearney and Martin McBride

Rhona Colwell and Welsh opera students

Opera and popular classics from the singers of the The Royal Welsh College of Music and Drama

Rhona was brought up on the Isle of Skye where her initial experience in singing came from performing traditional Gaelic songs. This led to private singing lessons with Ann Lampard, OBE, then Head of Voice at the Junior Academy of Music in London and who has since moved to Skye.

Rhona and her husband Tom Colwell have moved from Skye to Wales so that Rhona can study at the RWCMD. She is joined by nine other student singers and a pianist, who will perform a variety of opera/musical theatre, solo and group items, from their German, Italian and French and British song repertoire.
